

1. LIVELIHOOD PROGRAMMES:

We strongly believe significant transformation in livelihoods takes long-term systemic engagement that addresses different elements of the livelihood ecosystem in an integrated manner. However, the journey of change often begins with a single step. Therefore the Society has organized its livelihood programmes but using the existing skills of the people by creating more opportunities for self-employed. The Society has also used the micro credit options with the opportunity of self-employment and for more confirmation of these opportunities for practical and productive purpose.

Accordingly the Society organizes its awareness generation initiatives to promote opportunities for self-employment among the poor and needy people which helped to motivate the interested people to identify their own skills and understanding the opportunities for improvising and producing some items to sale in the market and confirm some income out of the total process.

Considering the above concept, the Society has organized the following livelihood programmes-

Weaving training programme -In order to cater to the needs of destitute, orphan, widow, deserted wife and women in distress the Society have set up training centres to provide Weaving training programme so as to enable them to be self supported and self employed. The entire efforts were organized by the Society to ensure flow of profitability on long-term basis of these women.

Training-cum-Production Centre on Mushrooms- At a time when the non-availability of quality spawn has hit the pace of mushroom farming in the region, the Society has introduced a training-cum-production centre (TPC) on Mushroom at Master Para, Melaghar, Shipahijala for creating opportunity of self-employment. Since the process completes in few weeks with low investment, the Society encourages local youths to adopt as the means for their sustainable livelihoods.
